Al Hieb Scholarship

A Scholarship for Seniors pursuing Journalism or Education at an Oregon College or University

Al Hieb made a difference in the Tigard-Tualatin community. He was a big believer in community service and directed much of his volunteer efforts toward education. From the time his sons were in elementary school to long after they graduated, Al spent countless hours volunteering for the schools. His service began with Templeton's annual Spaghetti Dinner and included years of support for the water polo and swimming programs at both high schools. In 1995, he began eight years of service on the school board. He also served as a budget committee member and on the district's long range planning committee.

Al Hieb was a parent, government employee, local business owner, active community member and a friend of many. After working for 20 years for the federal government, Al bought the Regal Courier newspaper in King City. He used the paper to build a sense of community among subscribers and also to help make better connections between the retirees who read his newspaper and the schools. Al was a realistic person, who used good judgment, wisdom and his life experience to advise and support others. His influence has touched many people and our community is a better place due to his efforts.

These scholarships are dedicated to the memory of Al Hieb, past chairperson and member of the Tigard-Tualatin School Board and community volunteer. They have been established by an anonymous donor in recognition of Al's dedication to his community and the children of Tigard Tualatin School District and the many lives he touched.
